Thomas A. Coleman, Jr. has over 25 years of school leadership experience -- 15 years as a high school principal, and 8 as Superintendent at the Woodstown-Piles Grove Regional School District. Mr. Coleman has ventured outside the educational box, exploring leadership strategies from successful private sector companies such as The Walt Disney Company and Stephen Covey programs. (A two-time attendee at Disney Leadership Training, he is a certified Disney Leader.) As his resume will attest, he has successfully gleaned and implemented many strategies from these programs in his leadership accomplishments. In particular, he has done so within the areas of community and staff relations, and his ability to successfully diagnose problems and prescribe successful solutions to those problems. Mr. Coleman has accomplished this by utilizing these leadership principles from the private sector and successfully implementing them in educational settings.
